

Thoughts on 9/11

After over 5 years, I've finally felt strong enough to revisit the events of September 11, 2001. I'm not an expert, physicist, or an engineer. I do remember however, feeling like I wasn't being told the entire story of what happened.

I know that fire generally does not burn hot enough to melt steel, and I had always believed that World Trade Center 7, a building which was not hit by planes, collapsed in on itself, just as a controlled demolition.

I've also been extremely puzzled by the lack of media attention on such grave inconsistencies in the reporting of facts.

The 9/11 Commission report was a huge series of Omissions, much of the testimony which didn't support the Bush Administration's story, was omitted from the report. The director of the 9/11 Commission Report, is a long-time Bush associate.

I believe Democracy is threatened, and that it's up to the American public to demand the truth of 9/11.

I am no longer willing to remain silent about my opinions. I've never been one to buy into "Conspiracy" theories, however, the story we've been told of 9/11 is just that, a Conspiracy Theory.

There are just TOO many unanswered questions. Stories that defy the laws of nature have been presented. What really happened on 9/11?
